CULTIVATING RASPBERRIES

As the ground is once more bare and the frost nearly out the time will soon be upon us for looking after our small fruits. And as I am especially interested in the raspberry I would like to say a few words in regard to the general management of that fruit. In the first place the soil should, if practicable have a large share of sand in its composition so that the roots may permeate it freely. Fertilize with well decomposed stable manure and wood ashes, if such materials can be had at reasonable cost. Then get one-year-old plants and set them five feet apart in the rows and with the rows six feet apart, which will give room to work among them with a horse and cultivator. After setting the plants it is a good plan to drive down a small stake—laths will do very well; then when the plants get up say eighteen inches, tie with a string to keep the wind from blowing them down. Those varieties that have black cap blood in them are the best for the million as they are more hardy and do not spread from the roots like the red sorts. They should be pinched in when they reach the height of about three feet to force out good strong laterals. The next spring after the ground is settled; and before the buds start, prune back the laterals to within six or eight inches from the main cane, also, at the same time cut out all the old wood that fruited the year before. Some cultivators recommend pruning out the old wood immediately after fruiting, but, that is all wrong, for the old wood is necessary to help mature and protect the young shoots, also to hold the snow about the roots in winter.

The red varieties I do not cut back until the spring pruning, when I cut out the old wood the same as with other varieties. As ... berry, the raspberry affects a ... better profit for the amount of labor expended than any other of the small fruits especially for those living near a good market. They are so perishable that they cannot be shipped very great distances and in the vicinity of Boston we have no fear of much Southern competition.

I not only expect to see more raspberries cultivated in the future, but to see ... better varieties produced ...

THE NEW HAMPSHIRE OUTRAGE.

[From the Boston Journal.]

Governor Weston of New Hampshire seems to have plainly subjected himself to the charge of violation of good faith, as well as of reckless indifference to the requirements of the laws and peace of the State, in the matter of the Senatorial questions. On the occasion of the hearing before the Governor and Council last Thursday he manifested an apparent interest in having these questions, instead of being dispatched offhand, according to the dictate of partisan leaders, fairly settled by the most authoritative tribunal available. He seemed to join heartily, therefore, in the proposition, which was carried, to refer the whole matter to the Supreme Court. At the same time many Republicans looked with suspicion upon the vote taken that, if the opinion of the Court should not be obtained in season, the Governor should be at liberty to take legal advice from other quarters, but none that we are aware of imputed any improper design to Governor Weston in this connection. But now—in the light, too, of the Governor's own action since that hearing—the whole action wears the look of a deliberate plot to disregard the laws and defeat the ends of justice. He did not show the least promptitude in obtaining the opinion of the Court. Instead of telegraphing the three judges as he might have done, on Thursday night or Friday morning, he waited until the next day, and then went on a visit to the Chief Justice, and obtained the latter's reply that he did not think it practicable for the Court to give the opinion before three o'clock Monday afternoon. There appears to have been no consultation with the other judges, no questions were submitted to either of them, nothing, in fact, was done to obtain that solution of a great public matter by which all fair minded men had agreed to abide.

Surely it was worth while to have taken great pains and to have run the risk of some inconveniences. There was no statute, no public necessity that stood in the way of giving the Superior Court all reasonable time for considering and deciding the questions which the Governor and Council had gone through the forms of referring to it. The Republicans at least had expressly agreed to waive all objections to the steps necessary to that end. The trouble, we fear, was, that the Democratic conspirators who under the party lash have been driving this matter to extremity, had reason to dread that the opinion of the Superior Court would be against them, and so they determined to avoid it and consummate their own schemes in the swiftest manner possible. If Governor Weston really stood out against them for a time, as he appeared to do, he gave in at last, and pusillanimously surrendered the Executive of New Hampshire to one of the most insolent and outrageous plots ever concocted by a cabal of irresponsible demagogues.

It is not worth while to review at this time the legal points of the Senatorial questions in issue. We have done that heretofore. It seems to us that there never was a clearer case than this, that the Governor and Council had no right to go behind the election officers' returns and throw out the votes for Gen. Head and Mr. Deering as blanks in order to count in their Democratic competitors. At all events, the Governor and Council decided that, before they would yield to any such demand, they wanted the advice of the Superior Court—and then they suddenly concluded to do without it and perpetrated the iniquity. We sympathize thoroughly with the feeling of astonishment and indignation which pervades not only, we believe, the Republicans of New Hampshire, but the minds of all candid and dispassionate citizens. An unjust, rash deed has been done, the confidence of the people in popular government has been grievously wounded, and a precedent of great danger has been set. It becomes the Republicans of New Hampshire in the inflexible determination which we know animates them to right this wrong and repair its evils, to act with great caution and consideration. The first object will be to leave no stone unturned to obtain an authoritative legal adjudication of the matter, which shall lead to a correction of the injustice, through the remedies allowed by the Constitution and laws of New Hampshire. They have able minds to make the most of these methods, and the good sense of the people will sanction the propriety of the course. If that fails or proves insufficient, there remain the people themselves—the people of that old Granite State, who have not upheld justice and right for a hundred years, to be tamely overridden by audacious demagogues in these times. Another election will give Governor Weston and his accomplices as valuable a lesson as Franklin Pierce learned, or ought to have learned, a dozen years ago.

THE SUN'S PARALLAX.

A curious coincidence has recently occurred in calculations of the sun's parallax made by entirely different methods. Prof. Galle, Director of the Observatory of Breslau, has just announced the result of his own computation of the value of the solar parallax. His method of attacking this important and deeply interesting problem was by means of observations of the little asteroid Flora, about the time of her opposition, in 1873, when the planet was also near perihelion. Corresponding observations were made with the same special object in view at the Observatories in Bothkamp, Cape of Good Hope, Clinton, N. Y., Cordoba, Dublin, Leipsic, Melbourne, Moscow, Parsonstown, Washington and Upsala. We give the long list of names to show the number, range, and thoroughness of the observations. The result of all this work, and the uninitiated have little idea of the labor, accuracy, and minute attention to details required in such careful mathematical calculations, is that the solar parallax is inferred to be 8".879. Singularly enough this is the exact figure, as we have already informed our readers, lately announced from the Paris Observatory, to the English Astronomer Royal as the first result of observations on the recent Transit of Venus. M. Puiseux, who made the calculations, used for the purpose the observations taken at the French stations at Peking and St. Paul's Island; and from these data he deduces the value of the solar parallax also as 8".879, or 91,000,000 miles. This wonderful correspondence in results from entirely different premises, will greatly increase the interest in the many solutions of the problem which are being made at the present time by the astronomers of all nations. It will, however, take years to complete the work from data gained at the last Transit, and there is little probability that the sun's distance will become an accepted quantity, at least before the observations on the coming transit of 1882 shall confirm those already in the possession of astronomers.

GEN. JOHN C. BRECKENRIDGE.

Major-General John C. Breckenridge, who died at Lexington, Kentucky, on Monday, was born near that place January 21, 1821, was educated for the profession of law, but at the breaking out of the war with Mexico he entered the military service, though so late that he saw but little active service. Upon his return he was elected to the Kentucky legislature, and in 1851 to the United States Congress. The mission to Spain was tendered him by President Pierce, but he declined it. In 1857 he was elected Vice-President, with Buchanan President, and in virtue of office became President of the Senate, being the youngest officer who ever held that position. One of his first public performances was the delivery of a eulogy on Henry Clay. He was nominated for President in 1860 by the extreme Southern party, but was defeated. Elected to the Senate as the successor of J. J. Crittenden, he held his seat during most of the extra session beginning July 4, 1861. Toward the last of the session he went over to the Confederates, and published a letter stating his reasons for taking this step. He was afterward formally expelled from the Senate for disloyalty. His military career was not remarkable. He first entered the campaign in Kentucky. He participated in the battle of Stone River, having risen previous to that date to the rank of Major-General. He held an important command in Louisiana in the summer of 1863. On the 5th of August he attacked the Federal garrison at Baton Rouge and was repulsed. His later campaigns in East Tennessee and in Virginia did not bring him any enviable distinction as a military officer. He was Secretary of War in Jefferson Davis's Cabinet in February, 1865, which position he held until the close of the war. He then escaped to Cuba, and thence to England. He remained abroad until 1870, when he returned and avowed his determination to take no part in politics thenceforth—a resolution which he strictly observed, devoting his attention entirely to his profession. On the Tuesday previous to his death a difficult surgical operation was performed upon him, and from that time he sank steadily. The physicians are of the opinion that his liver was injured by a blow he received during the war from a fragment of a shell, and that his suffering and death are due entirely to that injury.

Farmers from various parts of Jackson and Clay counties, Kansas, continue to bring in news of ravages of grasshoppers. The grass is nearly destroyed and wheat and oats have suffered terribly. The only salvation for the crops is the departure of the grasshoppers, which in some localities has begun, and thousands also are dying, the ground in many places being covered with the dead.

Those queer people, the Chinese, have hardly finished their "official" mourning for the late Emperor, when they are called upon to begin a second series of lamentations in behalf of his unhappy consort, who departed this life about two months after her lord. According to rule, the whole Empire should for one year be drowned in the depths of woe on account of the death of the late Tung-che, but an edict from his baby successor mercifully shortened the term to sixty days. Tung-che's widow, who was expected to give birth to a possible heir to the throne, died March 24, and her demise is now to be lugubriously celebrated. The fact that she was probably "put out of the way" has nothing to do with the official proclamation concerning her departure. It would have been very inconvenient to the new government meant if she had become the mother of an heir to the throne. Her death makes things pleasant all round, and the "old Regency" has a new lease of life.

Samuel J. Simmons, a brother of Collector Simmons, of the Boston Custom House, has been appointed to a position in the Custom House in New York.

POLITICAL AND PERSONAL.

Some very instructive, if not startling, documents are promised in regard to the New Hampshire plot.

Is it possible that Gov. Weston of New Hampshire in his interview with Chief Justice Cushing, may have learned enough to render him and his Democratic confederates less inclined than ever to wish for the opinion of the Superior Court?

The Springfield Republican says that we shall come to regard intemperance as we are coming to regard bad drainage and small-pox, as a nuisance which it is for the interest of every property owner and citizen to suppress by combination of private effort and public authority.

The controversy between Wheeling and Charleston about the site of the West Virginia capital has been brought to a new stage by the arrest at Charleston of the State officers superintending, under the order of Governor Jacob, the packing of the State archives for removal to Wheeling.

A daughter of "Admiral" Semmes was recently married at Mobile, standing under a "large, rich and magnificent Confederate flag, of the costliest material and most exquisitely embroidered, which was made and presented to Admiral Semmes by the ladies of London, while commanding the Alabama."

Statistics of the Connecticut Legislature show that that body is composed of one hundred and seven farmers, thirty-three manufacturers, twenty-eight merchants, eleven lawyers, seven physicians, four bankers and two clergymen, besides those whose callings can in no two cases be classified under a single head.

One of the most humorous incidents in connection with the Civil Rights question occurred recently on the Central Railway of Georgia. Representative Alexander H. Stephens, by accident, took a seat in a car which was reserved for colored persons, and was summarily ordered to withdraw by the conductor, who did not know him.

The London Chronicle, while inviting public attention to Howes & Cushing's Heller's Circus, gave them the following notice:—"No exhibition of the kind ever before given in this realm has commanded so general an approval of its audience, such generous patronage or more enthusiastic applause. No Circus we have ever seen, could justly claim so much of artistic elegance—such brilliancy and dash—such never tiring variety and interest. Such exhibitions are always welcomed and attended by the best classes—both rich and poor."

DOMESTIC NEWS.

THE JEFFERSON BORDEN MUTINY.

THE MURDER OF THE MATES.

A DESPERATE SITUATION.

Full Particulars of the Affair

The Plunder of the Vessel Contemplated—The Bodies of the Murdered Mates thrown Overboard

NEW YORK May 19 Full details of the [illegible] of schooner Jefferson Borden [illegible] the mutineers contemplated [illegible] having the vessel [illegible] murdered [illegible] Charles H [illegible] Miller the leader, tried to get the Captain [illegible] but Captain [illegible] and [illegible] with his revolver [illegible] from attack then

The Assault on the Captain

He was assaulted however on reaching the deck by a shower of bottles, from behind [illegible] When he fired on the mutineers [illegible] retired to the forward deck house The captain [illegible] with his [illegible] collected all the available firearms three revolvers and a double barrel [illegible] and made ready for a renewed at[tack] He did not however dare to emerge from their quarters until five o'clock in the morning when day had broken and [illegible] the boisterous weather that had [illegible] from [illegible]

The Mutineers Caged

The Captain crept [illegible] and finding the men all dozing he called up the deck house door They did not offer any opposition but refused to surrender themselves and declared they would not submit to the captain Captain Patterson though in this dire extremity and suffering an anxiety which can be imagined [illegible] apparently with great mercy He offered to accept the submission of the men on their consenting to be put in irons but plainly told them if they did not he would fire upon them and disable them

They Refuse to Surrender.

The men however were firm in their refusal and at length the captain had no alternative as he states, but to fire upon them Shot after shot was fired in through the deck house window [illegible] through a hole made in the side and still though wounded they declined to yield On investigation the Captain found his two mates his brothers and the boy Henry Miller, [illegible] of Calais, Me., all missing. A Swedish sailor was at the helm and was not one of the [mutineers]

Searching for the Murdered Mates

The men for a long time would not admit that they had thrown them overboard, and with the hope that they were still alive he again and again demanded of the men what they had done with them The American, Smith, at length volunteered to give up the mates if the firing should be stopped The captain replied that as soon as the whereabouts of the mates was made known the firing should cease A search was made in every conceivable part of the ship, but it was not until the men yielded to Captain Patterson's authority that they admitted the fatal truth and Miller, who was suffering much from his wounds, confessed that they had been thrown overboard They had been murdered before the captain was called from his berth

The Boy Found.

The boy appeared the next day (April 21st) from the captain's quarters and stated that a large handkerchief was tied tightly over his mouth his hands secured with a rope dragged from his berth and dropped into the lower hold of the forecastle He managed in course of time to extricate himself, climb up through the hatchway and in the darkness crept aft and hid in the officers' quarters The boy states that he was suspected by the men of watching them and they would no doubt have murdered him had they not known him to be skillful in the use of the wheel, and they might require his future services.

The Passage After the Mutiny.

Though the mutiny was to all appearances effectually quelled the position of the captain and those faithful to him was by no means without anxiety. They were a thousand miles from land with a large vessel to manage and only a crew of four hands to rely upon, the captain two men and a boy. For seven days and nights this small crew managed to keep the vessel in its course, but with what difficulty may be well imagined. Mrs Patterson, with heroic courage and devotion made herself of great use, frequently relieving her husband of his watch, and so allowing him to take the rest he so greatly needed.

Help Secured—The Arrival in London.

On the 20th a Norwegian bark, bound for London, was hailed from which one man was spared. On Thursday, May 6th, the vessel entered the Thames, having at the nose entrance taken on three extra [illegible] hands and a pilot as well as a medical man sent by the consignee Messages were sent on board from Mr. Nunn, (United States Consul in London, and arriving at the docks Captain Patterson was heartily greeted by a number of American captains whose vessels were in port

THE BROOKLYN TRIAL

THE ATTENDANCE WEDNESDAY.

Judge Porter's Argument Begun.

Opening of the Court Wednesday—The Audience.

BROOKLYN May 19 It was something like the opening day at the Beecher trial to-day There was crowding in the court doors outside and the greatest anxiety manifested to gain admission but the crowds were not the same and there was no rudeness or unseemingly struggling, they were a respectable class of people who come to-day, ladies and gentlemen who love to hear brilliant and effective speeches and [illegible] with all the intonations and accessories which no report can convey For about 40 minutes before the arrival of the Judge, every seat being filled, the audience discussed in low tones the qualities of the leading counsel and the liklihood of the jury agreeing on a verdict for either side The most disinterested people seem to be entirely at a loss what to expect if not a disagreement of the jury. The defendant's sisters his two sons and numerous friends and relatives were early in court and as usual Deacons Cobb [illegible] Ministry of Plymouth church attended to the [s]eating of respectable visitors About 30 ladies were in court Mr Beecher wife and daughter-in-law arrived together Defendant seemed to be in good spirits [illegible] the audience remained standing [illegible] the notable personage came in Mrs Tilton and the family with [illegible] for the defence were all absent.

As soon as the Judge came into Court he requested the audience to keep very quiet as any tolerance would be [illegible] the speaker and [illegible] attention of the jury

Judge Porter's Summing Up

At five minutes after 11 ex-Judge Porter commenced to sum up for the defense He spoke slowly and emphatically—so nothing with a trembling voice and could not be heard very distinctly by the press He set out with remarks on the number of days the trial has so far occupied He said the jury were five months from their business in the service of Theodore Tilton he charged the defendant with adultery There was plain speaking on the part of the prosecution The wife of the plaintiff was [illegible] to self sacrifice and [illegible] he was [illegible] for it Before the evidence was closed on the part of the prosecution it seemed to the defense that the jury were impressed with the dramatic and [illegible] skill with which the prosecution was gotten up If it rested there the one juror but would say that the action never ought to have been brought Now however the [jury] will be prepared to have this case stand alone with the great Tichborne case, as the two greatest impostures in the history of [illegible] jurisprudence of the 19th century [illegible] of defendant is surrounded within [illegible] to sustain him [illegible] Tilton and Moulton [illegible] Kate Cary [illegible] there were parties who appeared as sponsors of accusation [illegible] whose name is a tower of strength not only to his church but to the city [illegible] citizen and [illegible] which he illumines by his [illegible]

There they saw fabricators and publishers of accusations and recommended it to the confidence of the church of God and of the country Against that the defence had a jury of [illegible] It was one of the features of the old English law that every [illegible] was to be tried by those who knew [illegible] There was [illegible] of the defendant [illegible] of wife children and grand children and the unbounded confidence of three [illegible] and worship [illegible] Plymouth church [illegible] of Brooklyn and New York the merchants citizens [illegible] and those who look up to him with grateful and reverent regard Even the clustering of hearts of young children who love him and who will live to bless his memory when they and counsel are mouldering [illegible] more the larger young men and women and children who love and honor him when Tilton and Moulton's perjury are proclaimed He does moreover that could not almost unanimously of his professional brethren not only of his own denomination but of every other denomination [illegible] False witnesses [illegible] then and of years ago [illegible] not once false witness against the neighbor knew the weakness of men Envy, malice greed and revenge often seek and breed corruption but in tribunals of justice innocence is secure Truth is strong next to Almighty, she needs no strategy these trials [illegible] error resorts to [illegible] like Tilton [illegible] Moulton think truth is that which is boldly asserted and stoutly maintained

The first obstacle these men [illegible] a clergyman [illegible] presumption of innocence That [illegible] the [illegible] every stage of the case [illegible] to every man and woman not proved to be guilty

The second obstacle they meet is the denial and oath of his innocence [illegible] The oath of an honest man of a man who was never forsworn That oath is absolutely conclusive in his favor, coupled with the presumption of innocence, unless overborne by overwhelming evidence of guilt

The third obstacle they meet is the unblemished character and unspotted purity of life of the woman up to the very day when this accusation was made

The fourth is that Moulton and Tilton for four years after their pretended knowledge of crime in private and public, by words and acts orally and in writing [illegible] the accusation that they now make, and that Tilton slept with the alleged adulteress as a pure and virtuous woman for [years] after the alleged adultery was discovered, and that he and Moulton maintained with her social and family relations for those four years

They meet the sixth obstacle in the fact that they admit they are without an oath on their lips in bitter and malignant hostility

They encounter the seventh obstacle in the fact that they are compelled to swear that in respect to the transactions in which they are now censors they lied for years

The eighth is that they are overborne by the testimony of witnesses of the highest character—some of them ladies of pure life and some of them leading merchants of New York and Brooklyn

The [ninth] is presented in the incoherent incredibility of the accusation in view of the surroundings.

Counsel made a touching reference to Mr and Mrs Beecher and their Christian labors and continued as follows With reference to the woman, (Mrs. Tilton,) it was agreed that down to Oct. 1868, she was wedded for 20 years to a man whom she loved to idolatry, she was a woman who had many domestic troubles, but yet she was faithful to her husband, faithful to her children and her church who labored so much to bring back, her husband, to the faith of his youth This woman with all her feebleness had her heart full of generous and noble sentiments. She was a woman so pure that the very man who to strike Beecher would have sent a lance through her heart, stands before the jury with an oath on his lips and tells them she is as pure as an angel, a woman truthful and intelligent and loyal in every relation and yet without passion fresh from the grave of her little child, walking up to her house and committing adultery. Why the thing is monstrous! And yet that was what the Jury had given five months of their lives to hear and pass upon. They were told that this woman without passion pure and devout, sinned with a minister of God who had invoked the blessing of heaven on her marriage, that the woman who could w[rite] [illegible] letters as she wrote, could be dec[eived] as to the nature of sin and the lang[uage] they put into his mouth [illegible] which Tilton used when he put his hand into Bessie Turner's neck, when he visited her in her bed chamber; suppose that monstrous incredible thing did occur; that this man who had all his life been teaching the precepts of the Master was all at once transformed into an adulterer, and a lady pure, benevolent, generous, faithful to God and her husband and children and the poor, had sinned If that occurred, were they [illegible] know he lived in the blaze of noonday, she knew it, yet they lay the scene of the crime [illegible]

in a house frequented at all times; frequented by defendants children and grand-children, a household of purity and peace

Judge Porter dwelt earnestly on the improbability and monstrosity of the charges of the prosecution against Mr. Beecher and Mrs Tilton reading extracts from her letters to show the depth of her affection for Tilton and referred to his (Tilton's) as shallow shams He said that Mr Beecher stood surrounded by friends in every State, while Tilton and Moulton stood alone He referred to Mrs Tilton as a wife and mother and eloquently touched upon her high Christian faith and devotion to her husband, whose charges if true, would destroy her MASONIC MATTERS On May 5th, Most Illustrious D Burnham Tracy, of Detroit, Michigan instituted in Portland De Bouillon Conclave of the "Imperial, Ecclesiastical and Military" Order of the Red Cross of Constantine, the Invincible Knights of the Holy Sepulchre and the Order of St. John the Evangelist, of this city The following are the officers of the newly established Conclave Most Puissant Sovereign, Frank H. Drummond; Viceroy, Charles I Collamore, Senior General, Arlington B Marston, Junior General, James Adams, High Prelate, George Lansil This chivalric and christian Order was founded A D 313 by Constantine, the great Roman Emperor It is the ancient Knighthood of Europe, and is the oldest ancient body of Christian Masonry known It is conferred upon Knights Templar and Masons of the 32° of the Scottish Rite, only in America and is the ne plus ultra of York Rite Masonry, being conferred upon a select few only Godfrey de Bouillon, whose name the new Conclave bears, was the hero of the first crusade, and died in Jerusalem, July 18, 1100.

The Times says that Luther Manson died in Kittery, leaving among other property, it is alleged, ten thousand dollars in bonds, His widow was appointed executrix, and failing to find the bonds, she charges three persons,—Newbury, Jane and Oliver G Haley with stealing them. The parties accused are husband, wife and son, Mrs Haley is a sister to the deceased, and the accused claim the bonds were presented to them before the late Luther Manson. They waived an examination and the case goes to the supreme court.

Whereas, Certain members of your committee deeming it for the interest of the cause of temperance necessary for the welfare and stability of the Temperance Reform Clubs in the State that a Grand State Club be formed therefore,

The reports were accepted and laid on the table, to be made the special order of business at the afternoon session

The Convention adjourned till 2 o'clock

Afternoon Session

The Convention met at 2 o'clock President Bryant in the chair

John Benson Jr., of Newport, opened a discussion upon the matter of voting by proxy, whereby clubs partially represented could cast a full vote through the delegate or delegates present

Mr King of Mechanic Falls said it was the fault of the clubs if they were not fully represented

Mr Hunter, of Brewer, thought it doubtful if a partial representation could express the opinion of an entire club

Dr Reynolds did not think any one in Bangor expects or desires the permanent location of the Grand Club in this city.

The Chairman did not deem it expedient or right to establish a precedent allowing those present to cast votes for those who were absent

The yeas and nays were called for, and the motion to allow partial delegations to cast the full vote of their clubs, was lost by 38 nays to 33 yeas

REPORTS TAKEN FROM THE TABLE

On motion of John Benson, Jr., the majority and minority reports were taken from the table. He then moved the adoption of the minority report as the sense of the convention, making a vigorous speech in its support The reform movement, he said, has done more by love and brotherly feeling than all other organizations which have preceded it. The clubs of the State were the offspring of the club in Bangor, by which the others had been organized. This club now asks to be relieved of this portion of their arduous duties. The location of a State organization would naturally fall to Bangor or Lewiston, he would not give a cent which. A head is needed to which all can come for aid, and assistance. The question of expense need not be considered so far as the remuneration of the officers would be concerned [illegible] would ask or expect pay for their labors in such a cause as this. Such an organization would more readily perfect the work so well begun than any other means.

OPPOSED TO CENTRALIZATION

Mr Knapp, of Norway, believed the best day's work the Clubs ever accomplished would be to successfully resist the permanent organization of a Grand State Club If by individual effort and by the work of separate Clubs, men are being saved by the scores and fifties, he would not jeopardize future success by exchanging a prosperity for the doubtful results of centralization

Mr. King, of Mechanic Falls, said all the Clubs are working for the same object. The only question is as to the best measures to employ. He decidedly objected to the political machinery which invariably accompanies a centralized State organization He represented the opinion and wishes of his Club in strenuously opposing a Grand State club of which politics and wire pulling would be a part Another objection would be the feeling on the part of local organizations that the responsibility for personal effort would thereby be taken from off their shoulders

CONTINUED DISCUSSION

The Chairman said he was in favor of adopting the minority report He favored the establishment of a Grand Club believing it would largely promote the interests of the cause. Some persons can smell [illegible] as far as the Devil can smell a Saint but he had no fears in this direction Bangor should not be forced to do all the general work for the State The question of finances should not prove a barrier, as the price of a drink paid by each member quarterly, would provide a handsome fund He knew no aspirants for the prospective offices and believed there were none

After some further discussion the minority report was lost by a vote of 29 yeas to [illegible] 33

A motion was made to lay the majority report on the table indefinitely After some struggling debate a recess of 10 minutes was taken for consultation as to the action advisable to pursue

SENSIBLE SUGGESTION

After recess, Mr Benson suggested that the question of a State Club be referred to the individual clubs, where it properly belongs A majority vote of these should decide it.

DECISIVE ACTION

On motion of Mr Eastman, of Lewiston a committee of five was appointed to whom was referred the matter of a Grand Club with instructions to confer with the clubs and report in three months The committee was appointed by acclamation as follows.

John Benson Jr Newport H M Bryant [illegible] Bangor [illegible] Lewiston [illegible] Mechanic Falls Joseph [illegible] J A Silsby Bucksport Wm P Joy Ellsworth P McMahon Pittsfield George Moore [illegible] P Jordan Oldtown

RESONANT COMPLIMENTS

The visiting clubs gave three cheers for the Bangor club, which were reciprocated and three deafening cheers and a tiger were given for the ladies of the Bangor Crusade

The Convention then adjourned to meet at Norombega Hall in the evening

Mass Meeting

At 7 o'clock the delegates to the Convention marched down Main street headed by the Bangor Cornet Band then across the Kenduskeag bridge around West Market Square and down Central street to Norombega Hall

The stage was occupied by the members of the convention while the body of the hall and the galleries were well filled by ladies and gentlemen interested in the reform movement The band occupied a position in the gallery directly facing the stage and gave several selections before the opening of the meeting which was called to order at 8 o'clock by the President of the Convention

RESOLUTIONS

John Benson Jr Chairman of the Committee on Resolutions reported the following

Whereas The Convention assembled here having [illegible] the delegates of the several Reform Clubs in the State of Maine to now [illegible] and declare their principles therefore, be it

Resolved That we as representatives of the various Temperance Reform Clubs in this State declare our firm adherence to the cause of temperance

Resolved That to the Allwise God we attribute our success and to God we render thanksgiving and praise for His goodness [and] mercy as shown in temperance [work]

Resolved That by love, by moral suasion by sobriety and by brotherly association we will continue this work until all [the] temperate men in this State and country shall be gathered together in one Grand Club non political and non sectarian

Resolved That to the Ladies of the Bangor Crusade we extend our sincere thanks for the invaluable assistance rendered in the temperance movement by them May God speed them in their labors

Resolved, That to Dr Henry A Reynolds and other members of the Bangor Reform Club we also extend our thanks for the many kindnesses shown

The resolutions were unanimously adopted after which, on motion the Convention adjourned sine die

Dr Reynolds was called to the chair and "The Morning Light is Breaking" was sung Prayer was offered by C H Taintor, of Auburn after which the audience joined in singing "Rock of Ages"

DR REYNOLDS

Dr Reynolds President of the Bangor Reform Club, said the result of the deliberations of the Convention had been extremely satisfactory to all although there had been some slight difference in opinion He was happy to announce a list of speakers entirely new to the citizens of Bangor—workers in the cause from other sections of the State He felt inexpressible pleasure to-night while marching to the hall, in reflecting on the great good which has been accomplished Some people consider that the Reform Club is doing "dirty work," but to help their fellows out of the gutter is a kind of work they esteem a pleasure and a duty to do. Bangor is the hardest town in the State for the temperance cause, and while the members of the Bangor Reform Club are humble men, he is proud of them because they have had the courage to come out and put their shoulders to the wheel In the visiting clubs are numbers of lawyers, merchants and leading citizens of the towns from which they come, it is a shame that the representative men of Bangor are not identified with the Club in this city. If he could refrain from drinking, any other man can do it; for he loves liquor as a babe loves milk, and to refrain from it is a daily fight. There are many noble men in the city who should sign the pledge who are now slaves to rum. An opportunity would be afforded such to sign the pledge before leaving the hall.

WILLIAM P. JOY,

William P. Joy, Esq., President of the Ellsworth Reform Club, was introduced He said that, unless he mistook the objects of the meeting, it was designed for congratulation upon the present condition of the temperance cause. Ample cause for such congratulations were to be found in the presence of reformed men on the platform. When the cause of temperance seemed hopeless, when the outlook was dark, the women came to the rescue, and the present movement was the result. The secret of the success is charity. The great argument against intemperance is not the great woes, but the daily violation of law which the moderate drinker constantly feels, pursuing him ever The speaker, in rising to speak, fully designed to exult over the glorious results of the reform movement but felt himself inadequate to do the subject justice

COMPLIMENT TO THE CRUSADE

Mr Reynolds deputed Mr Bryant of Lewiston, to escort Mrs. Crosman President of the Bangor Ladies' Crusade, to a seat on the platform, where she was greeted with three cheers and a tiger

A E. FARNHAM

Mr A E Farnham, of Pittsfield, was proud to represent the Club of his town It has been organized about four weeks and it would do one good to see the young men who belong to it. It times past it was said slavery could not be destroyed it had been done away with and would to God an emancipation proclamation could be issued that would free the slaves of rum in the United States

DAVID KNAPP

David Knapp Esq President of the Norway Club said it is wrong, wicked and degrading to drink rum He should not labor to prove it is a good, blessed [illegible] thing to leave it off, for he knows it He had as fair prospects as any man when he was young, but alcohol beckoned him on cheated him out of many years of his patrimony impoverished his family stole his religion, and landed him in a bark mill in Norway [Loud and long-continued applause] He doesn't care for the opinion of the aristocracy of Bangor, or any body else, he is glad that he signed the pledge Rum ridden, [illegible] saturated Norway is being revolutionized

A C ROBERTS

A C Roberts of the Hampden Reform Club, said that from the depths of degradation where rum had taken him he is now [illegible] and in his right mind He enlisted for life and thanks the [illegible] for what the Bangor Reform Club did for them

CASH CALLED FOR

Dr Reynolds read a recommendation of a book written by [illegible] Douthy [illegible] A collection was taken to defray the expenses of the convention Mr Bryant of Lewiston spoke of the Auburn Reformer a paper which has replaced the somewhat notorious Auburn Clipper [illegible] Reformed [illegible] "Nearer my God to Thee" was sung Dr Reynolds said he [illegible] the audience [illegible] through [illegible] [illegible] all night

JORDAN BAND

Jordan Band Vice President of the [illegible] Reform Club said he [illegible] Bath [illegible] [illegible] He [illegible] he told [illegible] to moderate drinkers [illegible] [illegible] thousands of dollars The moderate drinkers make the most drunkards Loud cheers [illegible] know why he ever drank, and he did not [illegible] until he was 27 years old When he swore off he reasoned it out [illegible] he had not drank for some months before he finally signed the pledge [illegible] induced to do by [illegible] Dr [illegible] speeches

SIGNING THE PLEDGE

While the audience [illegible] two [illegible] of Convention a number of persons responded to the invitation to sign the pledge

JOHN BENSON, JR

John Benson Jr President of the Newport Reform Club was introduced by Dr [Reynolds] as one of the youngest [illegible] years of [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] a [illegible] for all—not too poor [illegible] for [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] West [illegible] [illegible] of the Ladies Crusade of Bangor [illegible] extended over this State [illegible] adopted by [illegible] of their songs [illegible] response [illegible] [illegible] 300,000 [illegible] 100,000 [illegible]

ROBERT CRANSHAW

Robert Cranshaw of Lewiston related his personal experience [illegible] he [illegible] He had drunk all [illegible] [illegible] when [illegible] that rum results in rags in degradation and poverty In concluding his remarks he wished to say [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] excellent [illegible]

T. J STARRETT

T J Starrett [illegible] [illegible] Prison at Thomaston said he had [illegible] that should touch every heart He is connected with an institution that gathers up what rum has been doing for years in Maine [illegible] reform he should be glad [illegible] as good looking men and boys as many of those in the audience—sent to the Penitentiary by rum In all the list of prisoners a majority were made criminals by rum while among them not one person of total abstinence principles Bangor is well represented in the prison while Penobscot county contributes more than any other in the State [illegible] Rum liquor from this city and county and not a foreign prisoner will be sent from here to Thomaston In closing he urged the young men present not to go so far as to shed tears behind the bars

H M BRYANT

H M Bryant, of Lewiston was introduced As he commenced speaking a large number were leaving the hall, but he arrested their attention by relating one of "Camp meeting John's" audience-holders He once told a crowd under similar circumstances, that he had been a travelling preacher for forty years, but he never learned to talk to a travelling audience Mr. Bryant has been in the temperance work three years and intends to continue in it Lewiston Reform Club numbers upwards of 400 members represented at the Convention by seventeen delegates Rum is demoralizing and damaging, whether a man drinks or sells If he could have his way he would banish every drop of alcohol from the whole world It wouldn't hurt Bangor half as much to have 100 cases of small pox as the rumgrog shops A public sentiment must be created in favor of temperance Let the workers in the cause have sympathy and support.

C. H. TAINTOR

C. H. Taintor, President of the Auburn Reform Club, said he came to Maine four months ago to get clear of rum. He found his mistake, for here were cider and nails [illegible] and again he fell He has found there is power in God to save the fallen and lift men up. He is now connected with a Reform club of 225 members

OTHER SPEAKERS.

Elliot King, of Mechanic Falls, and two or three other prominent temperance workers addressed the audience, who by this time had become somewhat restive and impatient owing to the extreme lateness of the hour. It was only the unusual interest of the addresses and the enthusiasm that characterizing the occasion that had kept the larger portion of them so long, and it was not till after 11 o'clock that the meeting finally adjourned.

The delegates return to their homes to-day better prepared for the work before them, while the Bangor reformers have received fresh courage from the pleasant though brief association with co-workers from sister towns and cities

ART ASSOCIATION

The First Spring Exhibition—Private View to Members Last Evening—Opening to the Public To-day—Fine Collection

On last evening the regular monthly meeting of the Bangor Art Association was held at their rooms at which forty three new members were elected The meeting was also made the occasion of a private view of the first spring exhibition of paintings and other works of art which opens to the public to-day

The collection is more than creditable to the artists to the energy of the Association and to the art-taste and culture of the city The rooms in Prices block will be open from 10 a m till 10 p m daily for one week Owing to the press of other matter an extended notice is necessarily delayed but every one should visit the exhibition affording as it does excellent opportunities for study and comparison

... and Miss Herries laughingly ... "I will take you to your room ..."

My heart ached for her disappointment. What horribly blind eyes he did have, over our boy? what infatuation could have made him fall in love with such a girl as this?

When I went down to the drawing room I found Mrs Loraine there alone. She made no remark about Miss Herries whilst in itself sufficiently showed her disapproval. Miss Herries came down in good time, prettily though showily dressed in white with black lace and ribbons, and looking really very handsome. The conversation at dinner dragged painfully. Mrs Loraine was chilled and depressed, and Miss Herries, though now quite at her ease, was unfortunate enough in her subjects. She was anxious to please, but her admiration of the place, her praises of the room assigned were tasteless. The only sign of good taste that she showed was in abstaining of talking of Rupert—she never once mentioned him of her own accord, and barely responded to any accidental allusion to him. It was under the circumstances, I think, but it seemed to me unnatural. During the evening we tried every imaginable subject. She was good natured and very ready to talk apparently quite unconscious of her own deficiencies. The knowledge of German, vaunted by Rupert, was the merest school-girl smattering, her music was not absolutely bad, but commonplace and meaningless. She was ready to profess interest in any subject that Mrs Loraine started, but before bedtime came we both knew that the other must have discovered her to be ill-educated, unrefined and under-bred. When we went up stairs that night Mrs Loraine stopped at the turning which led to her own rooms; she could evidently bear no more. "I will say good-night here my dear," she said. "I am very tired, and Miss Barlow will kindly see that you have all you want in your room." ... I knew it meant that she wished to be alone ...

I accompanied Miss Herries to her room to see that all was as it should be. She set down her candle and closed the door. "Sit down and talk," she said ...
